Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife

LEAVE A LEGACY FOR THE FUTURE

Leaving a gift in your Will to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife is one of the most effective ways you can support long-term conservation.

The Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife (FNPW) is the charity partner of Australia's national parks. FNPW exists to safeguard natural Australia for future generations, by protecting, restoring and championing sustainable natural ecosystems in Australia.

After taking care of loved ones, many people leave gifts in their Wills for the charities and causes they have supported or admired over the years.

LEAVE A BETTER PLACE

By including a gift in your Will, you can... ensure a future where our national parks and native species will continue to be enjoyed.

Your gift can:

- add land to Australia's permanently protected national parks and restore and regenerate habitats;
- protect threatened species;
- conserve and communicate cultural heritage;
- improve visitor facilities in parks;
- assist in emergency response activities to aid injured wildlife and habitats
- educate, inspire, and engage current and future conservationists

Each and every one of us has it in our power to help protect Australia's environment and natural gifts. Your support makes a real difference. You can create an amazing legacy for this and future generations.

In its 50-year history, the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife has added over 500,000 hectares of land to Australia's national parks and protected areas. This land is now protected or all time, this is something your legacy can help to achieve.

The FNPW as contributed to the conservation of many more species as well as their habitats through gifts in Wills.

In partnership with Governments, corporates, and the community, FNPW has been caring for Australia's natural and cultural heritage since 1970. Together, we achieve this by:

- Growing Australia's national parks: land acquisitions for new or expanded area
- Protecting our native flora and fauna: ecosystem regeneration, breeding programmes, threatened species protection and wildlife corridors
- Preserving our cultural heritage: protecting and recording First Nations sites and healthy country planning
- Emergency response: bushfire recovery nurseries, tree planting and supporting Wildlife Heroes
- Educating and inspiring: corporate volunteer days (eg tree planting) , our Caring for Carers programme and Backyard Buddies programme

Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife

Leaving a gift in your Will to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife is one of the most effective ways you can support conservation. Providing a gift for a charity through your Will is also known as a 'bequest'. There are different ways to do this. Some options include:

A Whole of Estate Bequest:

If you have no dependents—or your children have established careers and are happy for you to. You may choose to leave the entirety of your estate to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife.

A Specific Amount:

A specific amount from your estate will be transferred to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife.

Life Insurance Policy
A Proportional Bequest:

A percentage of your choosing will be transferred as a gift to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife. Few of us can accurately anticipate our assets at death, so giving a percentage of your estate will retain flexibility.

A Bequest for Specific Purposes:

If you wish to leave a gift for a specific purpose such as land acquisition for Australia's protected areas, or to conserve Australian wildlife, you can specify this in your Will. Please contact the FNPW via 1800 898 626 or fnpw@fnpw.org.au to ensure your wishes can be fulfilled.

A Residual Bequest:

You can dictate your Will so that it provides for your loved ones and satisfies all debts and other terms first. The 'residue' of your estate, or what is left, would then be gifted to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife. This gift may be small or large, but in any case, it will be appreciated, and you will have the assurance that your loved ones will be provided for.

A Contingent Bequest:

An amount or portion of your Will can go to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife only if one or more of your beneficiaries of your Will do not survive you.

If your property will be needed to ensure a comfortable lifestyle for a loved one, consider leaving the use of your property to that person for their lifetime. At that person's death, the property will be gifted to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife, as specified in your Will. Or, you may set aside property for a period of years, generating income for a special purpose such as the education of children or grandchildren until a specific age. At the end of the period, all or a portion of the property could pass to the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife, as you have specified.

YOUR WILL

The Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife is not a legal practitioner. Please seek legal advice in composing your Will.

The FNPW understands that including a charitable gift in your Will is a very personal decision, and there are many different ways to leave a gift in your Will, so we encourage you to talk to your family and legal advisor to identity which way is the best for you and your personal circumstances.

After you have taken care of your loved ones, the work of the Foundation for National Parks & Wildlife would greatly benefit from a gift left in your Will.

Thank you so much for considering a gift in your Will, without you... we could not continue to grow parks and save species. Your legacy will protect natural Australia for future generations.
